

JAZZ AT THE MOVIES

www.bbc.co.uk

Jamie Cullum's BBC Radio 2 show has 920,000 listeners and is nominated for Music Radio Broadcaster of the Year at the Sony Radio Academy Awards. Jazz At The Movies is a two-part exploration of Cullum's great loves, jazz and film, and how the sound of the US South influenced Hollywood. He delves into the 1920s and 1930s and looks at the segregation of black and white musicians on screen and how the conservative Hays Code brought jazz cartoon icon Betty Boop's neckline up and hemline down. Cullum has an easy-going, likeable manner and his enthusiasm for the subjects shines through.
